Series Finals Wrap Up Friday At Woodbine

A pair of winter pacing series finals will be contested at Woodbine Racetrack on Friday night, including the $39,400(C) Blizzard for 3– and 4-year-old fillies and mares (Race 5) and the $41,400 Snowshoe for 3– and 4-year-old males (Race 7).

Although JK Pridenjoy won both of his Snowshoe preliminaries, because he drew post 7 for the final he is listed as the 7-2 second choice behind 3-1 favorite Gerardo, who he edged (by a neck and half-length) in both races. Gerardo, who will be driven by Louis Philippe Roy for trainer Richard Moreau, received the slight nod because of drawing inside his rival in post 3. That respect comes too despite the 3-year-old Gerardo still winless in 11 career attempts.

JK Pridenjoy, who on Dec. 26 finished last after starting from the outside post 10 in the $34,000 Valedictory Series final at Woodbine, comes into Friday’s race off a career-best 1:52.4 effort in round two of the Snowshoe. Trainer Nick Surick has enlisted Doug McNair to drive the 4-year-old son of Rock N Roll Heaven who is owned by JL Benson Stables.

Actually, JK Pridenjoy could have been riding a four-race win streak heading into the Blizzard final, but the skein was interrupted after the first victory at Yonkers Raceway when he finished fifth after flipping his palate, according to Surick.

Surick said JK Pridenjoy displayed throat issues after the purchase last May, which resulted in surgery performed by Dr. Patty Hogan.

“She said it would be 50-50 if it would work, but if it worked it would be really good. And that if he was racing good after two or three starts it would hold for good,” said Surick. “I think he is super talented and has a lot of ability.”

The two favorites in the Blizzard final will be meeting up for the first time after having drawn in to separate legs in the opening two legs. Circle The Page, the 5-2 favorite, was two-for-two in the prelims, including a career-best 1:52.4 victory last time out. Starting from post 8, the 4-year-old daughter of Real Artist will be driven by Jonathan Drury for trainer Victor Puddy.

The 3-1 second choice is Bettim Jackie, who finished fourth but was placed eighth in the Blizzard opener as a result of a disqualification for interference, but came back to win leg two with a lifetime-best 1:53.2 effort. Roy will drive the 3-year-old daughter of Andreoli Hanover for trainer Moreau.
War-N-Munn Looks For Super Bowl Weekend Win

While retired quarterback Warren Moon is a member of pro football’s Hall of Fame, his greatest success arguably came in the Canadian Football League, where he won five consecutive Grey Cup championships with the Edmonton Eskimos from 1978-82.

While Moon, who is currently the color commentator on the Seattle Seahawks radio network, never made it to the Super Bowl during his NFL career (he never got past the division round), his pacing namesake, War-N-Munn (no relation to actress Olivia Munn, former longtime girlfriend of Packers quarterback Aaron Rodgers), will be in action over the upcoming Super Bowl weekend. The 5-year-old son of Stonebridge Regal will start from post 1 in Race 8 on Saturday night at the Meadowlands, a $12,000 conditioned pace.

Just as Moon experienced the limelight north of the border, so too has War-N-Munn. In 2016, War-N-Munn achieved a “series trifecta,” capturing the finals of the Count B Series at Woodbine and the Diplomat and Youthful at Mohawk. Overall that year, War-N-Munn won eight of 26 starts, including a career-best 1:50.1 at Mohawk, and $128,506 in earnings.

Things were a bit different though in 2017 for War-N-Munn as he won just twice in 13 starts, adding $15,800 to his bankroll and bringing his total to $187,317. The pacer changed hands privately in May, when he was purchased by Floridian Glenn Goller.

Now in the barn of trainer Kerin Warner, War-N-Munn’s Saturday night start will be his second of the year, following an eighth-place finish in the same class on Jan. 27 after also starting from post 1. That start was War-N-Munn’s first since last June, when he made a break at the start at Yonkers as the 1-5 betting favorite before recovering to finish sixth.

Brett Miller was tabbed to drive War-N-Munn last time out and he will be back in the sulky on Saturday. Miller had prior experience with War-N-Munn twice last year, posting a 1:52 victory and a third. Miller got away eighth with War-N-Munn last week despite starting from the inside spot.—By Gordon Waterstone

EHV-1 Outbreak Shuts Down Racing At The Meadows

Racing at The Meadows has been suspended at least through Feb. 6 due to an outbreak of EHV-1 (Equine Herpes Virus) at the track. On Wednesday, Jan. 24, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture was notified that a Standardbred horse at The Meadows had showed clinical signs consistent with Equine Herpes Virus Myeloencephalopathy (EHM) and tested positive for EHV-1. At that time, two barns were placed under quarantine and all horses were restricted from entering or leaving the track.

In the days that followed, other horses on the grounds developed temperatures, and nasal swabs and blood were sent away for testing. On Monday, Jan. 29, three additional horses tested positive for EHV-1, but were only exhibiting the respiratory symptoms of the disease. The barns those horses were stabled in were quarantined and the infected horses were moved into isolation.

EHV-1 is a highly infectious disease that most commonly causes respiratory illness, but can also be neurologic (EHM).

Dr. Katie Flynn, an equine staff veterinarian with the California Department of Agriculture, is a former intern with The Horseman And Fair World magazine and a veteran of the backstretch at harness tracks. She has handled EHV-1 outbreaks in California and become a respected expert on biosecurity involving equines around the world. She served as the subcommittee chair for the United States Animal Health Association’s (USAHA) “2015 Guidelines for State Health Officials” on EHV-1 and EHM. She said the 2015 guidelines are the horse industry’s best resource for understanding EPH-1 and biosecurity.

EHV-1 is spread by direct horse-to-horse contact as well as indirectly. According to the USAHA guidelines, “the most common route of exposure is through the respiratory tract via aerosolized droplets from the respiratory tract secretions of a positive, shedding horse. Infection can also occur by oral or nasal exposure to virus contaminated surfaces such as hands, clothing and equipment. Clinically affected horses should be assumed to be contagious, particularly with respect to respiratory secretions, for at least 14 days.”

The USAHA’s guidelines paper notes that EHV-1 is considered to be commonly found “within most horse populations.” Random testing of normal horses for EHV-1 “can and likely will detect horses positive for EHV-1; this may represent transient presence of virus; or viral levels that are not sufficient to pose a significant risk of transmission of infection.” It is recommended that horses with high fevers and/or coughing or mild nasal discharge be tested for EHV-1, unless another cause is apparent.

The Meadows is not the first racing community to be hit with an EHV-1 outbreak this year. Belmont Park in New York, Laurel Race Course in Maryland, and Portland Meadows in Oregon have also been dealing with outbreaks. In addition, the University of Pennsylvania’s New Bolton Center had a case of EHV-1 and was under a quarantine.

Miami Valley Raceway has announced that it will not be accepting entries on any horse that has raced or been stabled at the western Pennsylvania track since Jan. 10, until further notice. Additionally, any horse who raced at The Meadows between Jan. 1 and Jan. 9, plus any horse stabled in the state of Pennsylvania (farms or fair tracks) since Jan. 1 will be required to submit a health certificate dated within 48 hours of the horse’s first start at Miami Valley, in addition to a negative laboratory result from a nasal swab test.

Recommendations For Biosecurity

a. Isolation is critical to controlling disease. Ideally, at the onset of suspicion of a compatible clinical signs of Equine Herpes Virus -1 infection, isolate the affected horse a minimum of 30 feet from all other horses.

b. Restrict designated personnel to work on positive or suspect cases. Ideally, these designated individuals should not handle any other horses on the property.

c. Place a footwear disinfectant and hand sanitizer outside each isolation stall. Provide disposable gloves for designated personnel to wear when handling EHV-1 test positive or suspect EHV-1/EHM horses.

d. Restrict access to the isolation area to essential personnel and the isolated animals.

e. Handle isolated horses last; personnel handling isolated horses should not be handling other horses without changing clothes. Provide disposable coveralls for use if a change of clothes is not feasible when entering and exiting the isolation area.

f. Clean and disinfect the stabling area where the EHV-1 test positive or suspect EHV-1/EHM horse has been.

Eliminate sharing of equipment and personnel

a. Clean and disinfect all brushes, halters, cross ties, lead ropes and tack which have previously been shared.

b. Avoid use of common halters, cross ties, lead ropes, wipe rags and tack. Use individual equipment for each horse; avoid sharing equipment.

c. If equipment must be shared, clean and disinfect all equipment before and after each use.

d. Avoid tying horses to fences or tie rails.

e. Avoid possible viral contamination of water buckets by not allowing the hose to enter or contact the bucket when filling the bucket with water.

Waiting On A Woman
“Just Loves The Game”

Over the years, Waiting On A Woman has proved himself a tough horse. It’s not a surprise because he’s been that way since the day he was born. He needed to be just to survive.

The fastest Maritime-bred trotter of all time nearly died after being born in April 2008 at the Prince Edward Island farm of father-and-son breeders Dave and Mitch Tierney. He battled through multiple bouts of colic and sickness before finally turning the corner and embarking on a career that has seen him win 62 races and $501,844 in purses.

“IT was pretty touch-and-go for the first 10 days or so,” Mitch Tierney said. “He was so sick; we almost lost him a handful of times. He ended up pulling through and the rest is history.

“From day one it wasn’t easy and straight through he’s been tough. He’s like nothing I’ve ever seen before. All he wants to do is win, and he’s done his fair share of it.”

Waiting On A Woman gets his next chance to add to his win total Friday at the Meadowlands Racetrack. The 10-year-old gelding competes in the eighth race, a $20,000 conditioned trot.

Tierney trained Waiting On A Woman at ages 2 and 3, when he set track records regularly on his way to Maritimes stardom. The horse has raced in the U.S. for the past five years and is now owned by New York’s Michael Polansky, but retains a strong fan following north of the border.

“All he wants to do is win, and he’s done his fair share of it.”
—Mitch Tierney

Waiting On A Woman, a son of Northern Bailey out of Southwind Faith, was named by Tierney after a Brad Paisley song. The horse’s nickname is Charlie, which was bestowed on him by one of Tierney’s young cousins when he was a yearling. The nickname has remained with Waiting On A Woman wherever he’s called home.

“It fits,” said Kyle Spagnola, who has trained Waiting On A Woman since the summer of 2015. “I don’t know if you can explain it. But if a horse ever looked like a Charlie, he’s a Charlie.”

Waiting On A Woman, who set his career mark of 1:52.2 at The Downs at Mohegan Sun Pocono in 2014 and equaled it at the Meadowlands in 2015, has won 62 of 188 lifetime starts for a nearly 33-percent victory rate.

Spagnola gave Waiting On A Woman a three-month layoff, which ended in December, to freshen up for racing at the 100 Career-Win Club Revised

The Jan. 19 issue of HarnessRacing Weekend Preview’s story about Foiled Again’s quest to win his 100th career race included a listing of horses over the past 40 years who won 100 or more races over their careers. The U.S. Trotting Association subsequently discovered errors were made in compiling some of those stats so the list has thus been changed.

The first list included 20 horses who had reached the 100-win mark. However, the USTA discovered two of the horses were credited with more wins than had occurred, so they have been dropped. Also, while Rambling Willie’s stats were accurate in total earnings of $2,038,219, he was shorted 47 starts and 17 wins. As a result, Rambling Willie is now the second winningest horse since 1976, behind only the 137-race winner Niffit.

As of Wednesday, Jan. 31, the 100-win list includes 17 horses, 14 of which are pacers and three are trotters. The current list can be found below:

David Miller Driving Saturday Night
At Australia’s Melton Track

Hall of Fame driver David Miller is on vacation Down Under with his wife, Misty, and friends Nifty and Robyn Norman, but he’s also doing a bit of work. Last week Miller was in New Zealand and drove two winners. This coming Saturday night he’ll be driving at the Tabcorp Park Melton track 25 miles west of Melbourne.

In New Zealand, Miller drove a winner at Addington Park on Jan. 26, winning a 1,950 meter race (1.2 miles) with the 3-year-old trotter Show Gait (Majestic Son-Sierra Roydon-Sierra Kosmos). Miller had six drives on the card and also picked up a second. The next day he won a race over a grass surface at Motukarara. The race also featured a standing start.

At Melton, Miller will be in much more familiar territory. A conventional starting gate is used, and the Melton oval is comparable to the seven-eighths mile Mohawk track, with sweeping turns.

Miller was scheduled for five drives at Melton on Saturday, which is a premier card featuring the $500,000 Hunter Cup. Miller even has a drive in that race, getting the assignment for Mister Wickham. They’ll be starting from the outside post 7 in the 13-horse field. The race will be contested at 2,760 meters (1.7 miles).

The Hunter Cup field includes the highly-regarded 5-year-old Bettor’s Delight stallion Lazarus NZ, plus Bling It On. Trained and driven by Mark Purdon, Lazarus N has won 34 of 42 lifetime starts.

Luke McCarthy, brother of U.S.-based Andrew McCarthy, will be driving Bling It On, who he regularly drives. Bling It On is an 8-year-old son of American Ideal with 45 career wins and a lifetime mark of 1:50 8/10ths.

McCarthy drove regularly in the U.S. in 2009 and posted 16 wins. One of McCarthy’s 2009 U.S. wins came with Muscle Hill in the World Trotting Derby, picking up a late catch-drive when rain forced the race to be delayed and the colt’s regular driver, Brian Sears, had to fly to Canada for a commitment in the Metro.

As for Miller’s mount Mister Wickham, he’s a bit of an underdog with a lifetime mark of 1:53.— By Kathy Parker

What The Hill Hearing Delayed Until April

Attorney Howard Taylor, representing the connections of What The Hill, who was disqualified from first in last year’s Hambletonian final as a result of interference, told HarnessRacing Weekend Preview on Tuesday morning, Jan. 30, that last week’s scheduled hearing regarding the incident has been postponed until late April before the New Jersey Appellate Court.

Taylor said while the race was in early August, because of scheduling delays and procedural issues the first hearing was not scheduled until late January.

“The (New Jersey) commission deemed the judges’ ruling as a final agency decision and said we had to file an appeal with the Appellate Court,” explained Taylor. “But I said you can’t file an appeal to the Appellate Court because all they do is review a record but there’s never been a record created to appeal from. The Appellate Court is not going to sit and watch the films and make the call. They are just going to rule on what was done, but there was nothing done.

“So we had to go to the Appellate division to ask them to remand the case back to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing. That’s what took so long. We have everything in line but we had to wait until it got scheduled. We had to get it back to the Administrative Law judge before we could go forward.” — By Gordon Waterstone

Five Recalls, Fines Part Of 2018 Prix d’Amerique

Readly Express, a Swedish-bred, French-sired trotter out of a 100 percent American-blooded mare, captured the Prix d’Amerique last Sunday (Jan. 28) in Paris. Readly Express won by a slim margin over defending Prix d’Amerique champion Bold Eagle, with the American-bred Propulsion third, 1 ½ lengths behind the winner. The mile rate of 1:54.3 equaled the track record, which had been set by Bold Eagle when he won the 2017 edition of the race.

Readly Express is a 6-year-old stallion by two-time Prix d’Amerique winner Ready Cash. His dam is Caddie Dream, a daughter of the American Winner-sired Viking Kronos and the mare Fatima Lavec, who hails from the maternal family of Mack Lobell.

Readly Express is trained by Timo Nurmos, who has participated in the U.S. trotting scene. Nurmos has bought horses at auction and even at one time owned a small interest in the Noel Daley-trained All Laid Out. Bjorn Goop, who drove Readly Express to victory, is no stranger to American trotting fans. He competed in last year’s World Driving Championship in Canada as Sweden’s representative, and in 2016 he was at the Meadowlands on Hambletonian Day, finishing second with Victor Gio IT in the Peter Haughton Memorial final and driving Dominion Beach in an elim for the Hambo.

Sweden’s respected Sulky Scene magazine gave Goop credit for picking up his very first Prix d’Amerique victory, but also noted the strategy of the drivers of the top three finishers, and how their actions resulted in fines.

Franck Nivard (the driver of Bold Eagle), Örjan Kihlström (up behind Propulsion), and Goop were fined for being too early at the starting line.

Both Nivard and Kihlström were slapped with higher fines than Goop—2,000 euros (about $2,500) and 700 euros ($870) for Goop. Lars Dahlgren, reporting for Sweden’s Sulky Sport magazine, wrote that the fines are obviously subjective as Goop stayed on the track instead of following the repeated instructions of the starting staff to drive back into the collection area next to the track for the restart. When the race finally got underway, of the top three finishers, Propulsion was first to the lead, but Kihlström yielded to Bird Parker and they were locked in the pocket until the 250-meter homestretch (about 820 feet). Bird Parker was still leading the way when the first-over Charly du Noyer (followed by Readly Express) galloped. As Charly du Noyer was restrained, there was a split second when Kihlström had the chance to move off the pylons with Propulsion. But in a fraction of a second, Goop veered left with Readly Express and took the path that could have been taken by Propulsion.

Bold Eagle enjoyed a trip behind Readly Express, which normally would have been akin to handing him the victory, but Readly Express had the strength to hold on for the triumph.

Usually the Prix d’Amerique champion returns for the Prix de France, which is held two weeks later and is at a shorter distance (2,100 meters, or 1.3 miles, versus 2,700 meters, and about 1.67 miles, for the Prix d’Amerique), and with a mobile start. Nurmos has announced he does not plan to race Readly Express until March 11, in the Grand Criterium de Vitesse at the Cagnes-sur-Mer track on the French Riviera.

Nurmos said because Readly Express raced completely barefoot in the Prix d’Amerique (as did Propulsion and most of the field), he needs time to recover from the race. Nurmos said while the Vincennes track is conducive to racing a horse barefoot, Readly Express’s hooves, especially his left front, which is white and more sensitive, need a break from racing.—By Kathy Parker

Burke Vows To Fight High TCO2 Test At Meadows

Trainer Ron Burke is continuing to fight the high TCO2 test his horse TJ Blast had at The Meadows on Monday, Jan. 22.

Burke had the horse placed in a secure, detention situation so the horse's TCO2 levels could be ascertained outside of a race-day environment.

Burke has declined to comment on the positive except to say via text, “I know we are innocent and will fight it till the end.”

According to a source, TJ Blast tested high for TCO2 once before while racing in Pennsylvania for a previous trainer, and when the trainer asked for a second test on that particular race day, the horse tested within the limits.

Burke has declined to comment on the positive except to say via text, “I know we are innocent and will fight it till the end.”

Per Pennsylvania’s rules, a horse which tests high is scratched and suspended from racing for 30 days. The trainer is also suspended for 30 days and is fined $1,000. Burke plans to appeal any ruling.

Burke's TCO2 positive came less than three weeks after an announcement about a new integrity initiative being launched by the Woodbine Entertainment Group and track owner Jeff Gural. Called the Standardbred Racing Integrity and Accountability Initiative, a first draft of its rules also called for penalties for parties if a horse had a TCO2 positive. A final version of the rules is expected before Feb. 15 stakes payments are due.

Horses are randomly selected for pre-race TCO2 testing in Pennsylvania, with the state conducted more than 30,000 of the tests in 2017. Other states conduct post-race TCO2 testing. Testing levels are based on whether the race is pre- or post-race, and whether or not a horse is on Lasix.

Burke-trained horses started 4,504 times in 2017, with a very large number of them racing at tracks in the Keystone State. He had no positives in 2017.

Blood-gas testing is commonly known as a TCO2 test because it measures total carbon dioxide, which is naturally present in a horse. TCO2 levels are known to vary in horses and a range of levels is set for Lasix and non-Lasix horses before a horse is said to be high. In the past there have been unusual circumstances that have caused high TCO2 levels in horses, and on rare occasions horses have been found to be naturally high.

TCO2 testing became common following the administration of baking soda in a slurry known as a “milkshake.” Milkshakes have been believed to help some horses improve their performance because the baking soda would help reduce lactate levels in muscles and thus help minimize fatigue.— By Kathy Parker

SUPER BOWL LII—PHILADELPHIA EAGLES vs. NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

The line for this year’s Super Bowl opened up with the Patriots as six-point favorites, but heavy wagering on the Eagles—including some multi-million dollar bets in Las Vegas—has dropped the spread to 4 1/2 points. While it looked bleak last year for the 31 Patriot backers in last year’s Super Bowl selections for Weekend Preview, they roared back to beat the Falcons 34-28. Props for last year go to Meadowlands/Tioga/Vernon owner Jeff Gural and driver Jason Bartlett, who nailed the score perfectly. Finishing third by a nose was trainer Nick Surick, who had the Patriots winning by a 35-28 score.

JASON BARTLETT (driver)
Patriots 24, Eagles 20. I think the Patriots will throw some different things at them differently defensively and confuse them a little bit. And the offense has Gronk back so it’s fine.

TIM BOJARSKI (Batavia Downs)
Eagles 35, Patriots 24. The aging Tom Brady gets outplayed by the upstart Nick Foles. The mighty Patriots will fall.

BOB BONI (Northwood Bloodstock)
Patriots 27, Eagles 20. I hope I’m wrong—and I usually am—but I just can’t go against Tom Brady.

GEORGE BRENNAN (driver)
Patriots 28, Eagles 7. I’m not a fan of either team but I guess I’ll be rooting for the Eagles a little bit because (defensive tackle) Fletcher Cox plays for them and he went to Mississippi State where my daughter goes to school. But New England is the best and tough to go against.

DAVE BROWER (Meadowlands)
Eagles 27, Patriots 24. Sadly, being a Giants and Jets fan, I cannot root for either team! However, I do think the Eagles have a legitimate chance at the upset.

BRIAN BROWN (trainer)
Eagles 30, Patriots 21. I’m going to root for the Eagles but I respect Brady and Belichick.

MURRAY BROWN (Hanover Shoe Farms)
Eagles 28, Patriots 21. No particular reason, but other than Brady, I think the Eagles are the better team.

COREY CALLAHAN (driver)
Patriots 27, Eagles 16. I don’t think anybody can beat the GOAT right now.

YANNICK GINGRAS (driver)
Patriots 27, Eagles 24. I’m rooting for the Patriots because of my wife. This might be their last run so they will want to finish up with a bang.

VICKI GINGRAS (wife of driver)
Patriots 28, Eagles 21. The Patriots have an amazing quarterback but the Eagles quarterback has got into his groove. I lived in Foxboro for a long time so I’m a Patriots fan.

JEFF GURAL (Meadowlands/Tioga/Vernon)
Patriots 31, Eagles 24. I give Philly a good chance but I don’t bet against Brady and Belichick in big games so hopefully they will cover the spread.

RON GURFEIN (trainer)
Eagles 28, Patriots 27. It’s going to be close. Philadelphia has the best defense in the game and won’t give up a lot of points to Brady. Believe me when I tell you that.

JOE HOLLOWAY (trainer)
Eagles 24, Patriots 21. The Patriots are great and have been forever, but they’re not as good as they once were. Jacksonville and Pittsburgh laid out a blueprint how to beat them but they didn’t follow through with it. I think the Eagles will keep punching if they get the Patriots down. The Eagles defense has looked pretty good.

ROGER HUSTON (The Meadows)
Patriots 27, Eagles 20. I hope I’m wrong—and I usually am—but I just can’t go against Tom Brady.

GREGG KEIDEL (Hollywood Dayton/Miami Valley)
Eagles 24, Patriots 17. The Eagles will fly high! Nick Foles will pass the audition for a starting position elsewhere next year.

TOM KELLEY (former MLB manager/owner)
Patriots 31, Eagles 28. It’s so hard to go against Brady. The Patriots are something. I’d like the Eagles to win but I have to reluctantly pick New England.

PAUL KELLEY (trainer)
Patriots 24, Eagles 17. The Patriots are just good. Plain and simple. They know how to win. It goes back to the same thing, and it’s not even Brady. You’re giving Belichick two weeks to prepare and I think that’s tough.

ROGER HUSTON (The Meadows)
Eagles 24, Patriots 17. The Eagles defense will get to Brady.

GEORGE BRENNAN (driver)
Patriots 28, Eagles 24. I’m not a fan of either team but I guess I’ll be rooting for the Eagles a little bit because (defensive tackle) Fletcher Cox plays for them and he went to Mississippi State where my daughter goes to school. But New England is the best and tough to go against.

YANNICK GINGRAS (driver)
Patriots 27, Eagles 24. I’m rooting for the Patriots because of my wife. This might be their last run so they will want to finish up with a bang.

HEATHER VITALE (TV personality)
Eagles 30, Patriots 27. Much of this comes down to stopping Brady and I think the Eagles defense is ready. The Eagles have overcome other odds this season and the team itself is so totally likeable and cheer-worthy! Fly Eagles Fly!

GORDON WATERSTONE (Weekend Preview)
Patriots 27, Eagles 13. Although Foles played pretty good in the NFC Championship game, two weeks of watching film by Belichick and Patricia will lay out the game plan to expose the former backup quarterback. DC Patricia heads to coach my Lions on a high note!

DAVE WEAVER (TVG host)
Patriots 34, Eagles 17. Experience just too vital in this game. No one knows the Super Bowl better than Tom Brady and with his years waning, this is a very significant game as far as the history of the sport is concerned. Can't see him not playing above and beyond to cement his legacy.

MARK WEAVER (owner)
Patriots 50, Eagles 0. The Patriots are a complete LOCK! There is no chance they lose. The Eagles will be lucky to score. Probably the easiest pick in the history of sports. Just have the parade already!

KEN WEINGARTNER (USTA)
Eagles 24, Patriots 23. As a Giants fan it pains me to think the Eagles will win their first Super Bowl, but Philly is riding its underdog status and can surprise again if Foles and Co. take care of the ball.

MIKE WILDER (driver)
Patriots 33, Eagles 27. It might be an upset though because the Eagles are playing great, but when you go up against New England it's a whole different ballgame

CHARLIE WILLIAMS (caretaker)
Eagles 28, Patriots 24. I like the Eagles but Brady is tough.

SCOTT ZERON (driver)
Patriots 31, Eagles 27. I’m happy both teams got in. The Pats win because they are the most seasoned. But it’s tough to argue against the Eagles though since Foles has been great since they lost Wentz. The fans of both teams are crazy so it will be entertaining.

For years the annual breeding season got underway the second week in February, but Diamond Creek Farm has stepped up the kick-off by a week. Diamond Creek plans to start collecting stallions, and breeding any available mares, beginning on Monday, Feb. 5.

“We started early last year for the first time,” said Diamond Creek’s Adam Bowden. “Our horses are back (from Australia) and getting them back into a routine is good for them, so starting a week early works fine. We won’t have a lot of breeding for them the first week, but we’ve got a few.”

Diamond Creek stands six stallions at its Pennsylvania farm: Always B Miki, A Rocknroll Dance, Sweet Lou, Father Patrick, Southwind Frank and Creatine. Also under Diamond Creek management are Downbytheseaside, who stands at Sugar Valley Farm in Ohio, and Ponder, standing at Schwartz Boarding Farm in Indiana.

Always B Miki, A Rocknroll Dance, Sweet Lou and Creatine just returned from Australia last week. They flew into New York’s JFK airport and were quarantined at the new state-of-the-art Ark facility before shipping to Diamond Creek.

Diamond Creek collects its stallions four days a week, except for trotting sire Southwind Frank, who will be collected Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Last year Southwind Frank was bred to 118 mares but didn’t have the fertility numbers to breed a full book of 140 mares.

“I think he’ll do well with breeding three days a week this season,” said Bowden. “He’s a more mature male this year. His virility is more evident and his semen matches up with that.”

Bowden said mares being bred to Southwind Frank this year will be bred on both fresh and frozen semen. The son of Muscle Hill was collected between October and January and the semen frozen, which will allow Diamond Creek to breed 70 mares with frozen semen and another 70 with fresh semen.

Diamond Creek has 70 broodmares and as of Feb. 1, had five new foals. The first was a colt by A Rocknroll Dance out of the accomplished Somwheroverarainbow. She is scheduled to be bred to Sweet Lou. Diamond Creek is awaiting the birth of the first foal from Fable, a full sister to Pure Country, the 2017 Pacing Mare of the Year. Fable is carrying a filly by Always B Miki. Another Diamond Creek mare scheduled to foal soon is Summer Mystery, who is carrying a full sister to Lost In Time, the 2017 Two-Year-Old Pacing Colt of the Year.

Although Diamond Creek had ultrasounds done to determine the sex of the foals being carried by Fable and Summer Mystery, Bowden said the farm does not ultrasound all of its mares to determine the sex of foals.

In addition to its broodmare band, Pure Country is one of 24 horses Diamond Creek has in training. Diamond Creek’s racing stable grew by one recently with the purchase of 2016 Jugette champion LA Delight. The 5-year-old daughter of Bettor’s Delight has been placed in training with Nancy Johansson, but Bowden said she could possibly join the broodmare band following a spring racing campaign. He expects 2018 will be the last season on the track for Pure Country.

And in other news that somewhat relates to the breeding industry, a Thoroughbred yearling sale in New Zealand recently had a surprise for those in attendance until the last horse in the sale left the ring.

Punters.com reported that a female streaker put on a performance of sorts in the ring. The woman’s appearance in the ring was caught on video. She “skipped around the parade ring in her birthday suit before showing off her acrobatic skills with a couple of well-executed cartwheels.”

The story added that bookmaker Rob Waterhouse witnessed the performance and posted a video of it on Twitter, with the following comment: “An unusual and appealing lot going through the Karaka sale ring in NZ: an athletic, precocious type, good stride – plenty of bounce, if a shade frisky.” — By Kathy Parker
